

Seeing (things) Whole
Fall Conference 2010
October 22—24, 2010

Recovering the Heart of Leadership

Whole People, Whole Leaders for Whole Organizations

We understand with a fresh sense of urgency that if we are to have trustworthy institutions - organizations and corporations capable of and committed to serving the common good - we need more leaders who are capable of holding these organizations and their purpose in trust. The formation of integrative leaders who are capable of seeing things whole is perhaps the number one challenge facing the fields of business management and leadership studies and development. This calls for the restoration of heart - compassion - to the heart of leadership, no matter where we are.

Nowhere is this struggle for recovery of heart more apparent than in the ongoing high-stakes efforts to reform our healthcare system. This year's STW Fall Conference invites you into this conversation around restoring compassion to the heart of leadership and management within the healthcare industry. Our focus organization for the weekend will be Catholic Healthcare Partners, a large Catholic healthcare system serving predominantly lower-income urban communities. As participants in this conference, you'll be invited to join with others from diverse traditions and backgrounds in holding CHP in trust around concrete and pressing challenges facing their organization - employees, management systems, executive and board leadership - as they seek to serve the common good.

In the process, you'll be invited to reflect on your own leadership journey and will meet others who share your commitment to restoring compassion to the heart of leadership and to shaping organizations as a force for great good in the world around us.
